

Japanese Eight-Panel Screen: Gold and Silver Minimalist Composition

This exceptional eight-panel screen reduces the landscape to its most essential elements, juxtaposing a luminous field of textured gold with a single diagonal band of silver. Created circa 1900 using applied gold and silver on paper, the composition anticipates the minimalist aesthetic that would emerge decades later, while remaining firmly rooted in Japanese principles of balance, simplicity, and spatial harmony. Finished with a natural wood frame, the screen functions equally as a work of art and an architectural element.
