

Japanese Six-Panel Screen: Vibrant Ocean Landscape with Fishing Nets

Dating to circa 1930, this striking pair of six-panel screens presents a dynamic seascape of rolling waves surging through woven bamboo fishing nets beneath a brilliant cobalt sky punctuated by luminous gold clouds. Executed in mineral pigments on gold leaf, the composition transforms traditional coastal imagery into a bold decorative statement, combining rhythmic wave patterns with the geometric structure of the nets to create a remarkable sense of movement and depth. The vibrant palette and stylized forms reflect the continued evolution of Japanese screen painting in the early twentieth century, where classical motifs were often reinterpreted with fresh color and dramatic design. Finished with silk brocade borders and lacquered wood trim, the pair exemplifies the exceptional craftsmanship and visual sophistication of modern Japanese decorative arts.
