Uminosachi Yamanosachi (Fruits of the Sea and Mountains)

Circa 1850, this beautifully executed pair of Japanese paintings celebrates the complementary gifts of land and sea through the traditional theme of Uminosachi Yamanosachi—"Fruits of the Sea and Fruits of the Mountains." One panel presents an abundant harvest of seasonal fruits and vegetables, while the other depicts an equally rich assortment of fish, shellfish, and marine life, together symbolizing prosperity, balance, and gratitude for nature's bounty. Painted in fine mineral pigments on silk, the compositions are mounted in Japanese-style frames that recall a two-panel screen, with panels that can also be separately framed if desired. Natural wood trim, gold-dusted paper matting, and silk ties complete this exceptionally crafted presentation, making the pair both a celebration of Japanese artistic tradition and an elegant decorative statement.
